Description

This magnificent garniture exemplifies the pinnacle of 19th-century French decorative arts, embodying the grandeur and refinement of the Empire style. The set comprises a central mantel clock flanked by a pair of elegant candelabra, all united by a harmonious blend of form, function, and artistic expression.

The Clock:

The centerpiece of the garniture is a captivating mantel clock. The clock face, with its Roman numerals and finely crafted hands, is framed by a dramatic architectural composition. Two majestic columns, adorned with gilded bronze capitals and bases, support a frieze featuring stylized winged creatures and stars, evoking a sense of celestial grandeur.

Each candelabrum features a graceful female figure as its support. These elegant figures, likely representing classical muses or goddesses, are meticulously cast in bronze, with flowing drapery and delicate features, showcasing the exceptional skill of the artisans involved. Above each figure, a cluster of candle arms gracefully ascend, terminating in elegant candle cups.

Materials and Craftsmanship:

The set is a testament to the exquisite craftsmanship of the period. The clock and candelabra are cast in gilded bronze, creating a luminous and opulent effect. The bases of the clock and candelabra are adorned with slabs of malachite, a luxurious and richly colored stone that adds a striking contrast and enhances the overall visual impact. Intricate details, such as acanthus leaf motifs, floral swags, and delicate beading, are meticulously executed, showcasing the exceptional skill of the artisans.

Historical Significance:

This garniture embodies the artistic and cultural aspirations of the Empire period, with its emphasis on classical motifs, grandeur, and the use of luxurious materials. It represents a significant achievement in 19th-century French decorative arts and would be a prized addition to any discerning collection.
