Description

A very nice and fine Swiss wood carving. The disabled long hair terrier is resting beside a stub with his crook on his legs. The sculpture was executed ca. 1900, Swiss Brienz.

The tradition of wood carving in Brienz dates back to mid of the 19th century. People in the region were looking for new employment opportunities. They used their skills from traditional crafts, carving everyday objects and sculptures, and created a new business. Many woodcarvers were trained in the 'School of Wood Carving, Brienz' which was established in 1884. Around 1900 the woodcarving industry counted ca. 2000 woodcarvers. Brienz woodcarvings were presented on several world fairs with great success. With the Gran Tour
