Maurice Fallières (1883-1965) was a recognized painter at the turn of the century, he studied notably under the famous François Gall, and his work has a similar style and skill. Fallières was recognized for his skilled, moving depictions of Paris and of an industrializing century; he was at the heart of this period, France's new century. Fallières particularly specialized in post impressionist paintings of Paris street scenes, views along the riverbank, the Pont Neuf, Ile de la Cité, Notre Dame and Montmartre.
