Edouard Goerg was born in Australia in 1893 to French parents, into a family of champagne merchants. He soon won their counter in England where he remained a few years before settling in Paris in 1900. Very early intended for painting, he became a pupil of Paul Sérusier and Maurice Denis at the Académie de Ranson where he studied from 1913 to 1914. From 1920, he became one of the major figures of French Expressionism. In the interwar period, his success was evident. He participated in the Sacred Art Workshops with his former master Maurice Denis. He was elected member of the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris in 1965. In 1968 an exhibition was
