landscapes, still lifes and portraits. He visited many European countries, North Africa in 1897, the Belgian Congo in 1913 as well as India, Japan, China and the islands of the South Pacific. During this period, Bastien was also a member of the Brussels circle Labeur. In 1911, at the instigation of King Albert, the Belgian government ordered him and Paul Mathieu, Armand Apol and Philippe Swyncop to build a Panorama of the Congo for the Universal and International Exhibition in Ghent in 1913. Bastien went into exile in England in October 1914 before enlisting as a war volunteer in 1915. He was incorporated into the artistic section of the Belgian army. Bastien is professor of "painting from nature" at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Brussels from 1927 to 1945. Alfred Bastien will occupy the post of director three times: from October 1928 to January 1929, from June 1929 to October 1930 and a three-year mandate from September 1935 to September 1938. He will also be in charge of the interim landscape painting course of Paul Mathieu upon the latter's death for the academic year 1932-1933. Works in the museums of Antwerp, Ixelles, the Royal Museums of Fine Arts of Belgium in Brussels, Ghent, the Charlier museum, the Gaspar museum.
