Description

The famous Beguinage of Bruges painted by the artist Gaston Balande. The work in good condition is signed and located lower left, it is offered without frame and measures 60 cm by 73 cm. When the war was declared in 1914, Balande joined the hospital in Saujon as a volunteer nurse. He painted several paintings during this episode. In 1917, the Fine Arts administration recruited him to carry out artistic missions to the armies in order to paint, on the spot, the most significant war scenes. Sent to Nieuwpoort, Belgium, (the work on offer certainly dates from this period) and to Verdun, he composes, on the spot, particularly moving paintings which Léonce Bénédite said that they contain "the moral color of things". Works in the public collections Pont de Saint-Aignan, view from the terrace of the
