Description

An important four-section gilt bronze and mirrored glass table top, rectangular in shape with rounded ends and openwork sides depicting seated Bacchic figures holding garlands of vines. In the centre of the garlands, a central medallion of stylized laurel wreaths and thyrses, attributes of Bacchus. Each panel ends with a clawed base topped by a decorative element showing a basket of fruit.

Although the "surtout" appeared on tables as early as the Renaissance, it was not until the 18th and 19th centuries that these table pieces gained in importance and wealth. From a utilitarian element, the "surtout" became a decorative and sumptuous element. It shows the wealth and culture of its owner. Lamps and centrepieces were placed on top of the tableware.
