* This very beautiful travel writing desk bears on the first cover the brand of Maison Alphonse Giroux which was one of the most prestigious paper mills in Paris, established at 7, rue du Coq-Saint-Honoré from 1826 to 1848. Supplier to the Count of Chambord, she made work the best craftsmen, in particular the Thouvenin bookbinders until his death in 1834 and Pierre Gruel who had at that time the reputation of making the richest and luxurious trinkets. Maison Giroux required its artisans not to sign their work with their name. Alphonse Giroux presented under his name at the exhibition of 1834, bindings that Thouvenin, deceased, could no longer claim and obtained a silver medal, as bookbinder, with praise of the jury for the brilliance, richness and good taste gilding.
