Ghent and participated in international exhibitions including that of San Francisco in 1915. Appointed telegraph sergeant in the 145th Territorial Infantry Regiment during the First World War, he died in Pithiviers in the Loiret as a result of his injuries. His body was transferred to the Tournon cemetery and now rests in the family vault. The Château-musée de Tournon has several works by this artist. Most of his works are kept in French museums including the Carnavalet Museum in Paris and the Fine Arts Museum in Tours, Obituary of Eugène Bonneton (Le Temps - November 17, 1915) Sad news arrives from the front. Eugène Bonneton, the delicate painter of old Paris, La Bièvre and Parisian winters, has just died in an ambulance in the Argonne, suffocated by asphyxiating gases. French painting loses in him, along with a big heart, an artist of the most beautiful talent.
