it seems, where nothing is really natural ... Earth, leaves, roots, mushrooms, worms each element is a copy of reality as it lives in my memories as a curious observer. "In this 5° piece of the collection we have a clod with mushrooms, roots, leaves.The base is numbered with a copper seal and sealing wax, all enclosed in a glass dome. -About the artist:Andrea Bottazzini was born in Busto Arsizio in 1978. Graduated in scenography at the Brera Academy of Fine Arts. From 2007 he became assistant of the Set Designer Mauro Radaelli in various advertising productions for Barilla, Ferrero, Coca Cola and many others signed by directors of the caliber of Giuseppe Tornatore, Dario Piana, Luca Miniero, Paolo Genovese, Matteo Pellegrini.In 2013 he was Assistant Set Designer of the film "Il Capitale Umano" directed by Paolo Virzì.The scenography signed by Mauro Radaelli will win the David di Donatello.In addition to being valuable training experiences, they have become ideas for intensifying and deepening the search for detail in one's work which can no longer be limited to the design aspect but must become concrete.It's for this reason that in 2016 Bottazzini opened an art workshop whose peculiarity lies in preferring a work produced and cared for personally, in every phase.Resins, paper and wood are just some of the materials that between his 'skilled' hands give shape to environments and characters not only present in nature but also to supernatural creatures, fruit of the imagination and the mixture of different worlds.A scenographic artistic production begins that specializes in the representation of nature, through a personal realism. Since 2016 his art has been sought several times, especially in the fashion field; Gianfranco Ferré, Valentino, Gianvito Rossi, Etro, Bulgari, Marina Rinaldi, Aquazzurra are some of the main collaborations that he was invited to embellish with the uniqueness of his work, creating productions for the boutiques of Europe, Asia and America. . Alongside these are the set-ups designed for the
