Description

Long Presentation Cabinet, in Walnut, with wooden top with edges cut in Bec de Corbin. This top is made up of two panels and a central crosspiece, a composition that prevents any deformation. This piece of furniture opens with four doors, which can slide in pairs in a double wooden rail. By means of an iron system positioned on two of them, each door can pass from front to back and slide over a maximum of three rows. The interior is lined with a single large shelf, supported by fixed cleats and in the center by a vertical panel acting as a half partition. The facade is beautifully crafted and flanked by five fluted half columns arranged between each of the doors. These ornaments are topped with protruding half apples and rest on Generously Sculpted lower parts, forming the front legs of this particular Sideboard. In addition, panels cut into Arches and enriched with relief decorations end up embellishing this piece of furniture and materializing each door location. Like all Furniture with sliding doors, this Good has the advantage of offering a large storage capacity without requiring significant clearance. But above all it presents its own attributes, namely Harmonious Decorations, and almost invisible frames on glass doors, bringing a great Lightness to the whole.
