Description

A master of French sculpture in the 18th century, Etienne-Maurice Falconet (1716-1791) created this composition for the Marquise de Pompadour. This masterpiece is an allegorical subject depicting two winged cupids quarreling to catch a heart that has fallen to the ground. The two cherubs in motion and full of life are made with finesse. Touching, the two cherubs seem focused on their mission. Their lowered eyes give them an ingenuous look that is moving. The serious face surrounded by soft hair accompanied by curls, they seem determined. The chubby, naked bodies recall the joys and innocence of childhood. Pretty little wings, a bow, arrows and a garland of flowers perfectly illustrate the theme of love dear to the artist. With its beautiful size, this Alabaster sculpture presented on a carved mahogany base,
