Description

In a wooded park, a dozen young men and women are gathered, 9 of whom admire, comment and are surprised to see one of them standing on an outdoor table showing how to make soap bubbles successfully. Astonishment has interrupted a messy card game, while a couple lying on the grass not caring about the scene continues to make a house of cards by simply complaining. A lively genre scene with colors in harmony, the original of which was painted by Philippe Mercier (Berlin 1699-London 1760) and the latter by an 18th century follower. Painting in excellent condition, lined in the 19th century, in an 18th century frame in full harmony with the painted work. Philippe Mercier, a painter of portraits and genre scenes, born in Berlin in 1699, where he worked for a long time,
