Description

Very large Louis XIII period fireplace screen, early 17th century
Structure in walnut, pegged, feet ending in "goat's hooves" surmounted by a slight festoon
Very nice patina, traces of restoration on one foot and lack of wood on the central volute at the bottom, below, (not detrimental to the aesthetics of the whole)
Ancient traces of xylophages

Sliding screen in 17th century tapestry, in bright colors, depicting the abduction of Helen of Troy by Paris (on a more recent wooden frame)
Petit point highlights all around the tapestry, highlighting the central part
Piece with holes and lack of material (see photos), light retouching over
