Description

Venus disarming Cupid Important biscuit group.
The goddess, crowned with flowers and draped in an antique toga, negligently reveals her chest. She holds in her right hand, placed on a column, the quiver of arrows and the bow that she has just taken from Love.

Her other hand bridles a garland of flowers to clasp and hold the little winged and mischievous being who puts his left index finger to his mouth, as if to keep a secret. The looks and attitudes are most charming.

On the back of the cookie is the hollow inscription: "after Boizot"

Louis-Simon Boizot (1743-1809).

Sculptor to the king Louis XVI and director of the sculpture workshop at the Manufacture de Sèvres. He received the Prix de Rome in
