Description

Charming armchair with backrest called "escutcheon" or "shield". This model is in the neoclassical style in the style of Robert Adam, a famous English architect, decorator and furniture designer; 18th century. It rests on two saber-shaped rear legs and two fluted front legs surmounted by a connecting die decorated with a stylized flower. The armrest, the armrest supports as well as the perimeter of the backrest are sculpted with a pretty interlacing work. The top rail of the backrest is adorned with a charming sculpture representing two beautiful roses. Our seat is a beautiful manufacture from the end of the 19th century, very beginning of the 20th century, it has a very solid structure, it has been recently redone, the upholstery is therefore firm and comfortable, the covering fabric is in perfect
