Description

"Portrait of a woman", oil on copper, early 19th century. Size: In the frame H 34.5 x W 30.5 x D 4 cm / H 22.5 x W 16 cm. Beautiful oil painting by 'woman wearing typical period clothing, early 19th century. Instead of cloth, sumptuous fabrics such as velvet, silk or brocade were introduced and the lines of women's clothing became more fluid and seductive. This new eccentricity was a reflection of a wider cultural shift, the shift from Baroque to Rococo. The latter is a period characterized by the exuberant and excessive spirit which invaded Versailles and Paris and, from there, conquered the other European courts. In very good shape.
