up of a large tulip surrounded by flowers in light wood. and stained wood. Around the central panel we find a succession of nets of various essences accompanied by a string of alternating squares and angles formed by four triangles. The amaranth and the rosewood are surrounded by kingwood and in the bevel of the rosewood again. The flap is held in the open position by original iron hooks. The surround is in walnut and the center is lined with wine-colored leather with blind stamp, golden vignette and golden central motif. The inner part called the tabernacle is in walnut. We find 4 small drawers with inlaid fronts in rosewood, lemon tree fillet and violet wood, and shaped brass lens buttons with rosette. We also discover a large cache concealed by a sliding part. This magnificent desk rests on four slightly curved legs in rosewood, kingwood and lemon veneer, resting on original bronze shoes. This quality piece of furniture has benefited from the use of precious woods and authentic assembly in the 18th century. It will delight with all its inlaid faces, its details and its luminous colors.
