Description

Set composed of three paintings, made in oil on canvas and others on wood, each representing a portrait: in the largest a woman with blond hair and light eyes is represented, behind her we can see the Piazza dei Signori in Padua (cm 48 x 58); the second portrait represents a young boy with a neutral background (cm 31 x 45), like the last portrait in which is represented a woman with black hair and lips tinted with an intense red (cm 30x40). The three paintings are faithful to those who are the painter's favorite subjects, nothing less than genre scenes and commoner portraits, made with a style that oscillates between the Neapolitan school and the Lombard impressionist. The dating of the paintings revolves around the early post-war period, around the 1950s. Each painting is signed in pencil by the author, on two of the three paintings on the back there is the title of the work. The state of preservation of the three paintings is quite good, probably to be cleaned. It is specified that the set can be sold exclusively including the three paintings, they cannot be sold individually.
