Description

Our painting is a replica from the first half of the 19th century of the portrait that the famous portrait painter and landscape painter Thomas Gainsborough (1727 - 1788) made of Sara Siddons, a very fashionable English actress at the end of the 18th century. Seated in a large armchair, she is shown half-legged and in profile in front of a dark red draped curtain, no doubt an allusion to her profession as an actress. She wears an elegant dress with blue stripes, a yellow silk shawl and a large hat trimmed with ostrich feather. A theatrical, proud-looking, almost aristocratic portrait! Our replica is of great finesse of execution and in excellent condition after professional cleaning and the restoration of a small tear in the bottom at the top left. Its original frame with pearls and ribbons in gilded wood is
