expansive, the thickets of tress and shrubs less heavy than those in his brother's work. The small human and animal figures in his landscapes illustrate the romantic notion of the greatness of nature in contrast to the insignificance of man.

The painting Forest landscape with castle ruins and resting on path is currently exhibited at the famous Koekkoek-Haus Museum in Kleve, Germany. The B.C. Koekkoek-Haus is the former home of the Dutch painter Barend Cornelis Koekkoek and his family. The listed building in Kleve at Koekkoekplatz 1, formerly Kavarinerstrasse 33, has been used as a museum since 1960. Until 1997 it served as the museum of the city of Kleve under the name of the Koekkoek Municipal Museum.
