Description

Royal Antique is proud to present this magnificent pair of ornamental urns, exquisitely crafted from chiseled brass plated with 24-carat gold, beautifully combined with luxurious malachite stone. While traditionally serving as decorative urns, their opulent design and rich materials suggest they could also function as, or be inspired by, grand incense burners, embodying the grandeur and refined aesthetic of 19th-century decorative arts.

Design Highlights and Exquisite Craftsmanship: Noble Materials: Each urn is predominantly fashioned from malachite, a semi-precious stone celebrated for its deep green color and intricate natural veining. This vibrant stone is lavishly accented with chiseled brass, meticulously plated with 24-carat gold, creating a dazzling contrast that highlights the exceptional quality of the materials.

Figural Ornamentation: A distinctive feature of each urn is the presence of four exquisitely sculpted winged cherubs (or putti). These charming figures, rendered in gilt bronze, are dynamically posed, possibly holding garlands or supporting the central malachite body, adding a whimsical yet elegant sculptural element to the design.

Ornate Bronzework: The gilt bronze elements include highly detailed acanthus leaves, classical motifs, and decorative borders that frame both the malachite body and the rectangular bases. The precision of the chiseling attests to the masterful craftsmanship of the period.

Architectural Form: The urns feature a classical, tapering form with a fitted lid, topped with an ornate finial, further enhancing their monumental and decorative presence.

Style and Period: The rich combination of malachite and gilt bronze, along with the classical figural and ornamental motifs, is highly indicative of the 19th century, particularly aligning with the opulent tastes of the French Empire or Restoration periods. This era embraced luxurious materials and highly decorative forms, often drawing inspiration from antiquity.

Overall Impression: This captivating pair of malachite and gilt bronze urns represents a sophisticated blend of artistry and craftsmanship. They would make a stunning centerpiece or impressive accent pieces in any grand salon, library, or discerning collection, perfectly reflecting the opulence and refined artistry of 19th-century European decorative arts.
