Description

Superb turned solid rosewood (for all parts) desk, to be placed on the middle of a room
XVIIth cty European colonial work (Portuguese)

The table front facade opens with 3 large drawers, while the identical back facade has 3 false drawers, and the 2 sides 2 false drawers each.

This table was originally designed and built to be transported and disassembles very easily into 5 parts:

* the 2 side uprights each comprising 2 turned legs with 2 large balls in solid rosewood, a twisted low crosspiece and a high crosspiece supporting the top

* the 2 low lengthwise wooden crosspieces turned into spirals (with a double movement meeting in the center) *and finally the double top accommodating the drawers. The assembly is simply joined by iron and brass tie rods ensuring perfect cohesion.
(Note that for each of the uprights missed a false brass termination to be used for tightening the screws; check photos)

Please note the set of finely perforated and carved brass plates on the drawers and false drawers, and more on each angle of feet (they are all present)

Condition: very beautiful patina !

I specify that the table was not varnished but was just waxed and bricked. Turned very large wooden parts are naturally very shiny and the top, likewise, is... a real mirror!
