Description

Showcase Shrine with canted sides originally intended to protect a statue of sacred art inside.

The structure is made of fir wood painted with a faux marble effect, small mirrors are applied on this wooden structure, most of the surface is made of transparent glasses, some old original, some more recent.

The wood shows some rare signs of woodworm, one glass and several mirrors show aesthetically insignificant fractures.

The window opens at the back.

The interior is upholstered with a fabric dating from the beginning of the 20th century. For more detailed images, you can consult:
