Description

Hand-knotted Art Deco style carpet.
Hand-knotted rugs, of excellent craftsmanship with natural colors. In the 1920s and 1930s, carpets in the abstract art deco style, made from cartoons by painters, architects and decorators, were very popular, both in Europe and America. The creation of this Decorative carpet is inspired by the innovations of cubist painting which was born around 1910. These great artists who worked on the theory of colors, applied the results of their research to cartoon carpets, for a result rather spectacular. In the 1920s and 1930s, abstract decorations invaded the world of European rugs. More modern furniture required a new style of rug for the living environment and the artwork was an ideal response to this request. This style is highly sought after today because their aesthetics are perfectly suited to modern interiors, the pieces produced by the great decorators are overpriced but there are still interesting rugs from slightly less well-known designers at relatively affordable prices or pieces produced without signatures but in the spirit of that era like this rug on sale. This rug sets an example of audacity with its abstract shapes. It is characterized by a control of space, line and colors. Today we are witnessing an explosion of interest in decoration, which is becoming a veritable industry day by day. It is interesting to see the choice of a specialist merchant in certain cases who has very sure taste with an education of the eye, take a side which may surprise at first sight but turn out to be extraordinarily relevant in situ. . Today we can order for our customers exclusive decors for both contemporary interiors and traditional interiors. It is a pleasure and an advantage for a professional to have a client open to new ideas and ready to welcome innovation. Solution which is ultimately not as prohibitive as one might think and very often more economical than the acquisition of a classic specimen and which will not be truly integrated into an interior.
