Description

This deckchair was bought at the end of the 1980s, for a house in the South of France but it remained in a winter garden covered with woolen plaids and even softer than wool! Its patina is magnificent, the teak has taken on a golden blonde hue highlighted by the golden brass hinges which are no longer made at Tectona. The curved lines of its structure follow those of the body as closely as possible in order to provide maximum comfort, the unbleached canvas mattress in perfect condition reinforces this feeling of great comfort. By raising the armrests slightly and with a simple pressure from the back, the backrest takes the desired inclination to chat with your neighbour, read, or daydream. Once the idleness season is over, this generously shaped solid teak deckchair folds easily so that it can be stored in a
