Description

AUTEL PORTATIVE called GA'U

Tibet

First half of the 20th century

Silver-plated metal, terracotta, glass and fabric

H. 12.5 ; W 10 ; D 4 cm

Miniature silver-plated metal altar featuring a stylized chapel with a poly-lobed arch. It contains a Tibetan amulet, called a tsatsa, made of polychrome terracotta and seated in a box protected by a small glass window.

The silver-plated metal pediment is embossed with nine Buddhist emblems and the head of Makara on the lower part, against a background of foliage.
