Description

This pair of bookcases would be a creation made from mansion windows. The doors and hardware are therefore 18th century, the glasses have all been changed, and the cornice which reigns above the facade is also an old element. The set is 19th century and of very good quality. The set is soberly elegant, both haughty and robust. The whitewash patina provides a milky softness that contrasts nicely with the interior lining made up of various papers assembled with flour glue tinted with red and old pink pigments. This pair of unique and romantic furniture offers a nice setting for all kinds of objects. There are five shelves (six floors) to satisfy all storage, all display whims...
