Description

Clay figure, first half of the 19th century, Granada, Spain. Piece identified in the production of José Molina, a Granada artisan and trader from the first half of the 19th century, who stood out for the fineness of the clay pieces that he made and sold himself on the markets of Barcelona and Majorca. His pieces differ from other popular clay pieces of the time because of the type of their base and because they were accompanied by the stamping of his family name as a seal. This piece appears in the book Barros Granadinos published by the Board of Directors of the Alhambra and Generalife. Ministry of Tourism, Culture and Sports of the Junta de Andalucía in 2023, on page 31.
