wire also has in its entourage a molding with throat and beak of corbin in black varnish. Set back on the lengths and the depth we find a decorated set composed of a part with a glass door accompanied by identical molding at the bottom resting on two solid mahogany balusters. Note the presence of an adjustable shelf on racks. On each side of the window we find a shelf in the rear part and a large console that blends with a spiral blackened wooden molding. At the top of this window, a removable pediment decorated with scrolls and a crown of fruit. The back of this piece of furniture is made of oak. With its atypical blackened moldings, this display cabinet is a rare piece of furniture that will delight you with its exceptional mahogany essence.  Period: Late 19th century Perfect condition after restoration in our workshop.
