

Pair Of Frosted Opaline Glass Vases, 19th Century

1 300 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Parfait état

Diameter : environ 16 cm

Height : 28 cm

Description

With their patterns of oak leaves and blue acorns, these vases are the memory of the unanimous success of opaline in the bourgeoisie of the 19th century. With the refinement of crystal and half-crystal production methods, opalines are becoming more and more accessible and deviate from their mineral model of the beginning of the century. From the years of the Restoration under Louis-Philippe and Charles X, opalines were enriched, for the most luxurious, with new colors and textures, novelties particularly appreciated by a century which multiplied technological advances in color chemistry. Enhanced with golden borders, these two vases in perfect condition were probably to adorn a living room or refresh a bedroom.
