princess of the House of Savoy born in Turin in 1749 and died in Paris in 1792. In 1767, she married Louis-Alexandre de Bourbon, prince of Lamballe, son of the Duke of Penthièvre (himself son of the Count of Toulouse, legitimized son of Louis XIV and Madame de Montespan) and heir to a legitimized branch of the royal family of France. Friend of the Dauphine Marie-Antoinette who became queen, appointed her superintendent of her household. Having followed the royal family after the day of August 10, 1792, she was imprisoned in the prison of La Force and then was assassinated during the massacres of September.
