ceramics in Sèvres, after his education he returned to Desvres to make porcelain.

He was working with his father from 1906, he created decorative porcelain with great success and his porcelain was exported also to South America and Japan.

By the high cost of production of porcelain he stopped in the 1930s and continued with earthenware.

His factory was making a wide range of ceramic including lamps advertising objects vases and tiles.

With Fernand Léger who was a famous painter and potter in Biot in the South of France he had a cooperation together.

Till 1984 he was leading the company and his grandson Oliver continued his work.
