Description

Oil painting on panel by the artist P. Fragiaco, around the 1910s. The work entitled "Sail" represents a small sailboat in the middle of the sea with a figure on board from behind, a typical subject of his production artistic, because he was very fond of the landscapes of Venetian lagoons. The painting is executed by the artist's typical and recognizable textured brushstrokes, soft colors around blues, grays and blues with hints of orange. The work is signed in the lower right corner and also has a period Marconi frame in fir wood, carved and lacquered with gold filings. There is a wooden and white fabric passe-partout. On the back is a numbered label referring to an exhibition and a label fragment from the Galleria Geri in Milan.
