Description

This sideboard in solid and veneered mahogany opens with two doors with molded frames. They are darkened with panels with oblong marquetry of a more sustained hue. The edges, which are lighter, are laid out with a miter cut. These openings, like the uprights, are inlaid with lemon tree fillets. The left door locks with a clasp, while the right has a functional original lock with its key and an openwork brass entry. The interior of the doors is flush. This sideboard has a good volume, accessible, composed of two shelves on racks, offering three levels of adjustable storage. In the lower part, we find a projecting plinth with moldings on the edge. The top of this piece of furniture is formed by two well-joined boards, without a composite filling element. The edge of the fillet has a small strip of cross veneer,
