Description

This pedestal table entirely in solid mahogany has a top made of a single board whose edge is molded in the groove style. The belt is sober and offers a drawer on the front that pulls out from below. This is composed inside of several small lockers and a larger space. This set rests on a cylindrical shaft ending at the base with eight petals carved on a circular base, the top of which slopes slightly outwards. This base ends with four moving and overflowing feet. This pedestal table, combining sobriety and refinement, can be used as occasional furniture in any style of interior.

Period: Mid-19th century
